Mother, ..... the Aunts and George and I, (also the dogs Gyp and Barney) we were walking along Lees Road on our way home from the Town, when there was a loud clatter and down went the chain horse which was helping to pull the heavy load of cotton on its way to the Rome Mill. 'Oh dear', cried George, 'Is it dead?', but before it could move all the men rushed to it, and some held it down, whilst the others undid the chains so that the driver could back the shaft horse out of the way, thus giving the poor fallen one room to get up. 'Whoa now, take it gently', they called, and as soon as he was free they cried 'Up Lad, up Lad' and with another big clattering he struggled to his feet. The men looked him well over to see that he hadn't broken anything. He was alright, but shaken, and so was Miss Carter (who wore Pink). She was coming to meet us and was just going to cross over when the horse fell. She waves her umbrella to Aunt May and Aunt Frances who saw her and waved back. The woman who was cleaning her step got a bucket of fresh water for the horse and a glass for Miss Carter and soon the horses and all of us were on our way to Lees and home and the year was 1907.'16 x 26cms Provenance: Christopher Cole Fine Paintings, One London End, Beaconsfield, Bucks; Christies, London, Lot 49 December 2007
